Course Description:
A survey of the music of non-Western cultures and an introduction to the discipline of ethnomusicology. An understanding of the fundamentals of music and familiarity with music notation are recommended.

Course Overview:
This course is a survey of the musics and music cultures of the world, focusing on musics other than those of the Western European tradition. The course will serve as an introduction to the discipline of ethnomusicology, the study of music in the context of culture, emphasizing the meaning of particular musics to the people who practice them. In so doing, the course will not only highlight the distinctions typically observed between Western and non-Western music types, but will also demonstrate a methodology distinct from that of traditional musicology, which focuses on the structure of music and its place in the Western European historical context. By investigating the music of a variety of the world’s cultures, and how particular musics both reflect and shape the cultures of which they are a part, students will have opportunities to reflect upon views of the world that may be different than their own.

Much of the world’s music is created in the context of common life circumstances, where distinctions between performer and audience are obscured. In order to experience this melding of music with everyday life, opportunities will be afforded for not only listening to and learning about music, but also for making music in class, from group singing to playing a variety of rhythm instruments.

Comment [GB1]: This description suggests ways in which the course fulfills the Performing and Interpreting the Arts component of the GE.
General Education:
This course fulfills the “Performing and Interpreting the Arts,” category of the Common Inquiries portion of the General Education curriculum. Courses satisfying this requirement develop students’ understanding of the fine arts and performing arts, including music, visual arts, theatre, or dance. Such courses develop and expand perceptual faculties, develop physical practices integral to the art form, and explore the critical principles which guide artists in the area (Westmont College Catalogue).

While this course focuses on the interpretation of music in the context of culture, performance of music will also be emphasized. Students will learn rhythmic exercises drawn from the music examples provided in William Alves’ text and worship songs included in Michael Hawn’s collection. The class will lead worship songs as part of two Westmont Chapel services.

Course Objectives:

General
To better understand what music is.
To listen to music with an open mind.
To enjoy listening to a wide variety of music.

Cultural Interaction and Diversity
To appreciate the diversity of God’s world through encounters with diverse musics and cultures.
To become acquainted with the discipline of ethnomusicology.
To understand how music interacts with culture and society.
To appreciate how specific musical traditions derive from and influence the cultures of which they partake.
To discover how the distinction between Western and non-Western musics becomes obscured as various music cultures come into contact with and interact with each other.
To discover ways in which music has been a vehicle for repression and exploitation of non-western cultures.
To discover ways in which music can be a means of cross-cultural communication, as well as an agent in intercultural understanding.
To discover ways in which music has been an agent for redemption of cultural practices once thought antithetical to the Gospel.

Performance and Technical Elements
To comprehend the basic elements of music and musical terminology regarding pitch, tonality and mode, melody and melodic structure, rhythm and meter, timbre, and texture.
To develop fundamental music-making skills.
To learn non-western music vocabulary, particularly the names of non-western music instruments.
To become familiar with non-western tuning systems.
To become familiar with systems of music notation applicable to particular non-western musics.
To develop skills that enable us to listen to music critically.
To enjoy making music with others.
Course Requirements and Policies:

Attendance at all classes. You will record your attendance at each class session on the form provided (see handout: “Class Attendance”). In accordance with college policy, you may miss up to two class meetings without penalty.

Completion of assigned readings and listenings. You are expected to read the assigned pages before the class period for which they are assigned. You are expected to listen to the musical examples that accompany the assigned readings before the class period for which each reading is assigned.

Completion of exams. Exams may be taken late only in an emergency. If you need to take an exam at a time other than it is scheduled, notification must be given at least two weeks in advance. Rescheduling of the final exam must be accomplished through the office of the Registrar.

Completion of report and presentation. You will research a particular World Music tradition, artist, and/or ensemble. You will prepare a ten-page report and make a presentation to the class of the results of your investigation (see handout: “World Music Report and Presentation”).

Concert attendance. You are required to attend at least one instructor-approved concert of non-western music (details will be provided separately, transportation will be arranged). Discounted tickets for concerts will be available for purchase at the Music Department office.

Music-making activities, skills assessment, and listening exercises. You are required to participate in music-making activities in class, including performing written music examples found in the Alves text and worship songs found in the Hawn collection. Your ability to perform the rhythmic and melodic examples found in the Alves text will be assessed individually (See handout: “Music Skills Assessment”). You are required to participate in Westmont Chapel services when the class leads the assembly in singing worship songs and to submit a two-page reflective essay on these performance experiences (See handout: “Reflective Essay”). You are required to complete the Listening Exercises in the Alves text.

Demonstration of academic integrity. Instances of academic dishonesty, including plagiarism, cheating, or falsification, will result in a grade of “F” in the course and may result in suspension from the college (See, on the Westmont College Webpage, Academic Policies: Academic Dishonesty).
