Christopher J Eberle (PhD UMass/Amherst) is Associate Professor of Philosophy at the United States Naval Academy where he has taught since 2001. He specializes in the area of religion and politics and publishes regularly in that area including such articles as Religious Conviction in Liberal Politics (Cambridge, 2002); “Let Thousand Flowers Bloom: Religious Reasons in Public Life,” (2007); Journal of Legal Commentary, and “Consensus, Convergence, and Religiously Justified Coercion,” Public Affairs Quarterly (2012).

Currently Dr. Eberle completing a manuscript on religion and war tentatively titled “God and War: An Exploration.”