VOSKYUL LIBRARY AND ACADEMIC SERVICES

In the library, all educational support services—including Information Literacy Instruction, Research Help, Tutoring, and Interlibrary Loan—will be maintained, with a combination of drop-in and remote delivery.

Tables and chairs in the Learning Commons and group study rooms will be arranged to provide six feet of space between individuals. Many study carrels and chairs will be removed or covered. There will be regular cleaning of facilities throughout the day.

Materials can continue to be returned at the outside book drop or at the circulation desk. Plexiglass barriers will be installed at the help desks to facilitate the safe check-out of materials and engagement with library staff.

The Office of Disability Services will locate and position testing sites in the building that are spaced further apart from the current cubicles. We will clean testing spaces after each student's use of it. The usual drop-in service will not be allowed, but we will continue to arrange a large percentage of appointments through video conferencing. The staff in the office will be proactive in reaching out to students who would normally have in-person appointments, just so this era of "remote" and "socially distanced" learning does not increase any stigmas or anxieties about seeking help.

The Writers' Corner will continue tutoring remotely for the fall. A few selected in-person tutoring sessions could be in open-air spaces. Selected resource materials will be moved outside of Writers' Corner door on table for access by students without physical contact. The staff will be proactive and intentional in identifying (through faculty) and reaching out to students in need of assistance since drop-in traffic will not be allowed.
