

Helping your student SOAR

When our students start to leave the nest, it can be difficult to let go. But less control and more guidance may be exactly what they need to thrive.

Try not to track your student's every movement. Give them space to explore and experience.

Teach your student how to monitor their spending habits. Allow them to manage a credit/debit card. Let them pay for certain expenses.

Set communication expectations with your student. If they don't pick up or respond right away, give them time.
